Dear The Guardian Team,

Every year the non profit called the Climate Change Leadership Institute gives out climate leadership awards in six different categories (including courage, direct action, innovation, justice, conservation and education). This year we are proud to present The Guardian with the 2023 Climate Education Award for your excellence in covering the climate crisis by way of responsible, independent journalism and piercing investigative reporting.

The public interest is well served and the public is well educated by The Guardian's honest, substantive reporting on the subject of climate change. We need many more of the mainstream news and media companies to likewise be fearless in their coverage and to resolve their conflicts of interest. As The Guardian makes clear, "when reporting on events like the climate crisis we are not afraid to name who is responsible."

The stories that you do not only demonstrate the emergency that man made climate change represents, as well as the corruption that plagues us and perpetuates our so far lame response, but also they reveal our fellow humanity and the inspiring opportunity we all have to rise to the occasion.

We thank you for your integrity, for your leadership by example and for critically raising awareness in the United States and around the globe.

With much appreciation,

Robb Hirsch
Executive Director & Founder
